AFTER THE COLLISION.

Effects Upon the Nerves of Wreck Upon the Rails.

A wreck sometimes upsets even the most iron nerves. Once the wreck master on his arrival noticed a bare-headed man in overalls, covered with coal dust and blood, sitting beside his engine with tears running down his face. He recognized him as the engineer, who had been hauled out a few minutes before from under the mass of twisted, battered steel that had once been a locomotive. Singularly enough, beyond a few cuts and bruises he was unharmed. He was crying because he could not find his cap that he had bought new that day and begged the wreck master to help him hunt for it.

A passenger conductor of a train that was derailed and had plunged down an embankment crawled out of the confusion and rendered cool and efficient help during the half hour before the wreck train arrived. A little later the wreck master chanced to look around and saw the conductor standing beside him holding a matchbox to his ear and shaking it. Presently he put it back in his pocket, but took it out again in a moment and repeated his action.

"What's the matter with you?" asked the wreck master.
"My watch has stopped. I can't get it to going, and I don't know what time it is," answered the conductor, still listening to his matchbox.
The wreck master took the conductor by the shoulders and shook him roughly. Then he "came to."—Thaddeus S. Dayton in Harper's Weekly.

MADE SURE OF IT.

The Gift Was Delayed, but the Groom Got the Bird.

A wealthy patron of the turf in New York told an amusing story of a favorite groom and a turkey.
"I had once promised this groom," he said, "a Christmas turkey, but somehow in the rush and flurry of December I forgot it. It was some days after Christmas when I remembered how I had overlooked my faithful old friend.

"Meeting him in the paddock one morning and intending to make good my forgetfulness, I said to the groom by way of a joke:
"Well, Jenkins, how did you like that turkey I sent you?"

"It was a very fine bird, sir," said the groom. "I came very near losing it, though."

"How so?" said I, astonished.
"Well, sir," said Jenkins, "Christmas morning came, and your turkey hadn't reached me, so I rushed right off to the express company and asked the manager what he meant by not sending the bird up. The manager apologized, sir, very politely, and he took me into a back room, where there were ten or fifteen turkeys hanging, and he said the labels had been lost off them and I'd just better take my choice. So I chose the largest, sir, knowing your generosity, and it was fine. It ate grand. Thank you very much indeed, sir."—Washington Star.

Giants and Dwarfs.

In the seventeenth century all the abnormally large and small folks of Austria were assembled in Vienna in response to a whim of the empress. As circumstances required that all should be housed in one building, there was a fear that the imposing proportions of the giants would terrify the dwarfs. But the dwarfs teased and tormented the giants so that these overgrown mortals complained with tears in their eyes, and as a consequence sentinels had to be placed to protect the giants from the pygmy persecutors, for the smallest men had the biggest brains and the longest tongues.

The Lyman H. Howe moving pictures in the opera house last night gave a wide range of subjects and were thoroughly enjoyed by those who attended. To see the Howe pictures once is to wish to see them often. Perhaps the scenes of cadet life at Annapolis and West Point and the marine view might be ranked first, though it would be hard to make any comparison, as all were first-class.

If there is any reliance in the superstition of the "ground hog" idea, if there is a "ground hog" if he was so foolish as to poke his nose out to-day and a good many other "ifs" then we may look for a long "spell" of winter weather from this day on; for the signs most certainly pointed to-day to that. The ground hog could not have missed seeing his shadow, unless he was some blind as the sun shone brightly on a clear, cold day. But if you don't believe in the superstition, go right along shoveling in the coal just the same.

To-night there will be an entire change of program at the Pavilion, with the exception of the trained dogs, which will remain as it is. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stockton will put on a very funny Dutch comedy act, entitled, "The Professor's Tribulations." The only Dutch comedy act ever seen at the Pavilion and it is simply great, the best laugh producer we ever had.
